„Circus Rolls at Dawn” by James Dietz

Richthofen's Albatrosses

What other artist but Jim Dietz could so effectively bring us to a German airfield on a summer morning in 1917. Baron von Richthofen and his men ready their Albatross D.V. Scouts to fly a morning patrol along the front. The vivid colors of the sleek biplanes are brightened by the morning dew and clouds of exhaust from the starting engines hug the ground. The garish paint schemes used by Richthofen's unit made them easily recognizable, to both friend and foe.

Few WW II fliers are as well known as Germany's famous Red Baron, the highest scoring fighter pilot of the war with 80 aerial victories. Commanding his Flying Circus, Jasta 11, Richthofen ranged along the front bringing his fighters into play wherever they might be needed.
